NOTE TO READERS ABOUT SPACE MOUNTAIN: Many of you have written in asking when Space Mountain would be built at Disneyland. Construction of the exciting attraction began in June, and Space Mountain is now expected to be completed by Summer, 1977. There will be more news of Space Mountain in future issues of Disney News. Watch for it.–ED.

Sirs:

I am one of Walt Disney's greatest fans. I would like to know what Walt Disney's first cartoons were? I would also like to ask if Disneyland has any intention of changing Tomorrowland again? Thanks.

Sincerely,
John Skinner
San Jose, California

Walt Disney's first cartoons were a series of comedies which combined live-action and animated figures, called the "Alice Comedies." The first of these was "Alice's Day at Sea," released March 1, 1924. In 1927 Disney began producing a series of 26 cartoons starring a rabbit named Oswald. Mickey Mouse first appeared in 1928, in a sound cartoon titled "Steamboat Willie." Ideas for new rides and attractions for all lands of Disneyland and Walt Disney World are constantly being developed by WED "imagineers." Tomorrowland, like all of Disneyland, will continue to change somewhat as new attractions are built and older ones are refurbished or redesigned. See note above.–ED.

Sirs:

I have a question to ask you. I'd like to know who are the voices of Pluto and Goofy.

Sincerely,
Joanna Arnold
Zanesville, Ohio

Mickey Mouse's dog, Pluto, first appeared in a 1930 cartoon, "The Chain Gang." Since he only barks, no one person has been assigned as his voice. Goofy, appearing first in 1932, was voiced by a veteran Disney employee, Pinto Colvig–a former circus clown.–ED.

Sirs:

My family and I have gone to Disney World once a year for our vacation for the last three years. We think Walt Disney World has to be the greatest vacation spot in the world. The only word that can describe it is FANTASTIC! I have always been a Walt Disney fan. He was a brilliant man.

Sincerely,
Vince Scumaci
California, Maryland

Sirs:

I visited Disneyland last year and saw "America Sings." I wondered how the lights flash while the theater rotates. They puzzled me the most.

Sincerely,
Craig Walker
Los Angeles, California

The unique projection effect used in "America Sings" was developed especially for that attraction by the talented WED Imagineers. It uses a special light source to create the star-like effect seen by the audiences.–ED.

AMERICA ON PARADE

JUNE 14, 1975 –
SEPTEMBER 11, 1976
A SALUTE...A CELEBRATION
DEDICATED TO AMERICA'S

Disneyland celebrated a birthday this past July 17 and now, incredibly, is 20 years old.

During these first two decades we've had many exciting celebrations, but none can compare, in my opinion, to "America On Parade," a spectacular salute to America's 200th Anniversary...now playing daily at both Parks thru September 11, 1976.

I've enjoyed the Parade a dozen times this past summer...each time with new appreciation. But it's difficult to write about. That is, it's difficult to convey the excitement in mere words and pictures.

Leading the Parade are three Disney favorites, Mickey Mouse, Goofy and Donald Duck as the "Spirit of '76" delighting guests as they portray America's most patriotic symbols to the strains of "Yankee Doodle." Following this happy trio are more than 150 "People of America." These doll-like performers tower nearly eight feet tall and mingle with fifty huge parade units, making Park guests, young and old alike, seem like children enjoying a special party staged just for them.

Throughout "America on Parade," the large "people" work, dance, and play to the tunes of popular American songs. Songs like "Good Old Summertime," "This Land is Your Land," "There's No Business Like Show Business," and "God Bless America" engulf both Parks in prideful nostalgia.

Most of these familiar selections were recorded from a traditional band organ on multiple sound tracks with special effects and instrumental sounds added. The antique band organ ("Loudmouth Sadie Mae") which was used, is from a private collection belonging to Paul Eakin of Sikeston, Missouri. Looking vaguely like a pipe organ without keys but with horns, bells, drums and other ornate decorations, Sadie Mae's music reminds the listener of a tent circus or a carousel.

Each performance of "America on Parade" features a high school or college band in the grand finale. These talented young musicians are the only "real" people visible to the audience, since all the other participants are completely hidden inside their character costumes.

Arrangements have been made with Anaheim and Orlando schools for students to complement the cast while receiving academic credit and work-experience payments.

Club members' reaction to the Parade has been excellent and if you missed seeing it during this past summer, please note that it will be showing daily at both Parks during this Fall, Winter and Spring and through the Summer of '76.

And...although I highly recommend that you see the Parade, this is a reminder that "Great Moments with Mr. Lincoln" has returned as a featured part of the "Walt Disney Story," here at Disneyland. Mr. Lincoln's words have important meaning in today's troubled times.

As the nation struggles through the pangs of energy crises...inflation...recession... international tensions, and other bad news, our hosts and hostesses are striving ever harder to give you friendly, courteous and cheerful attention.

Our goal...to create happiness for you...is very strong in the minds of each of us here at Disneyland and at Walt Disney World.

America is marching down Main Street

Every day becomes a Fourth of July celebration as Disneyland and Walt Disney World present "America on Parade," a spectacular salute to America's 200th birthday.

"America on Parade" premiered last June as a joyful, colorful, wonderful patriotic pageant of the music, people and heritage of America – both past and present.

Thousands of Disney guests have already watched and cheered as Mickey Mouse, Goofy and Donald Duck proudly lead the three-quarter-mile-long procession through the center of each theme park.

The 50 giant-size parade units in the fun-filled musical extravaganza depict a variety of historical and memorable moments in the nation's 200-year past and highlight the contributions and achievements of the country's people. They present a stylized, whimsical and never-to-be-forgotten festival of America as only Disney can present it.

America is marching down Main Street

Towering above the throngs of young and old who gaze with delight and amusement are Disney's newest creations, the eight-foot-high, doll-like "People of America"–from Indians to auto drivers, Can-Can dancers to Ben Franklin, a Keystone cop to Uncle Sam–they dance their way through America's history and into the hearts and memories of those who watch one of Disney's most unique and delightful creations.

The parade, which features more than 150 people, is performed at both Disney theme parks daily at 3:00 p.m. During the summer months and some holidays there will be special evening performances of the parade followed by a red, white and blue fireworks display. As an extra attraction, each week the parade will salute one of the 50 states.

The parade's grand finale features high school and college marching bands especially invited to take part in this bicentennial salute.

From the first strains of "Yankee Doodle" to the closing bars of "God Bless America," Disney's "America on Parade" is itself destined to become a part of the Americana it celebrates: something to be seen, remembered and treasured for years to come.

Lake Buena

Morning. It is a beautiful time of day at Lake Buena Vista. The sun creeps up behind tall pine trees, gathering the mist steaming off the clear lagoon. Rabbits nibble on tender grasses, hesitating occasionally to wiggle their noses at the vain black birds admiring their reflections in a pool; an alert deer sniffs the air, stepping onto the golf course to join a pair of strutting peacocks.

Guests staying anywhere in this host community to Walt Disney World, who open their curtains or tee-off at the Lake Buena Vista Club in the early hours after dawn, usually can witness the serene beauty of awakening wildlife. For, Lake Buena Vista has retained the peacefulness of a small resort town, even though its four hotels, numerous vacation townhouses and "treehouses," and unique shopping village daily attract thousands of Disney guests.

The entrance road to the City of Lake Buena Vista (near the intersection of Interstate 4 and State Road 535) is a tree-and-flower-lined avenue overlooked by the high-rise hotels. The TraveLodge, Howard Johnson's, Royal Plaza and Dutch Inn are separated by attractively landscaped and hedged yards whose paths lead to lakes inhabited by large fish and turtles. A variety of wild, yet friendly, ducks wander freely over the property.

A charming combination of shops, boutiques, and restaurants lies just beyond the Hotel Plaza on the shores of Buena Vista Lagoon. Quite unlike the usual shopping center, the Lake Buena Vista Shopping Village displays its wares in individual, picturesque shops which encourage leisurely browsing and where guests are entertained by the talents of skilled craftsmen.

Within the old brick and wood-shingled buildings, glass cutters etch ships on carafes, potters shape clay into works of art, engravers enlay gold designs in steel, and candy makers twist sweet lollipops as youngsters watch with their noses pressed against the window.

Decorative flower and plant arrangements from the Flower Garden and European treasures from Von Otto's Antiques enhance many of the shop interiors.

The naturalness of the wooded and water-bounded surroundings also is used throughout the Village. Guests may enjoy thick sandwiches and imported beer in frosted mugs at the airy sidewalk tables of Der Heidelberger's Deli, and The Village Restaurant and Cap'n Jack's Oyster Bar guarantee pleasurable dining with a panoramic view of the lagoon.

A short walk from the Village are one- and two-bedroom Vacation Villas, available for long-term corporate leasing and corporate incentive vacation plans, or to individuals on a daily or weekly basis. Luxuriously furnished by Buena Vista Interiors, the townhouses are extremely comfortable retreats for business associates or vacationing families.

THE FLOWER GARDEN

Vista "Where the Peacocks Roam"

Daily housekeeping service, a 24-hour hospitality center, a large pool pavilion, and laundry machines are only part of the Villa package. Each guest may enjoy the magnificent golfing, tennis, swimming, and dining facilities of the Lake Buena Vista Club. The terraced backyard of the Club steps down to two putting greens, lighted tennis courts, and a marina before meeting the rolling fairways of a championship 18-hole golf course.

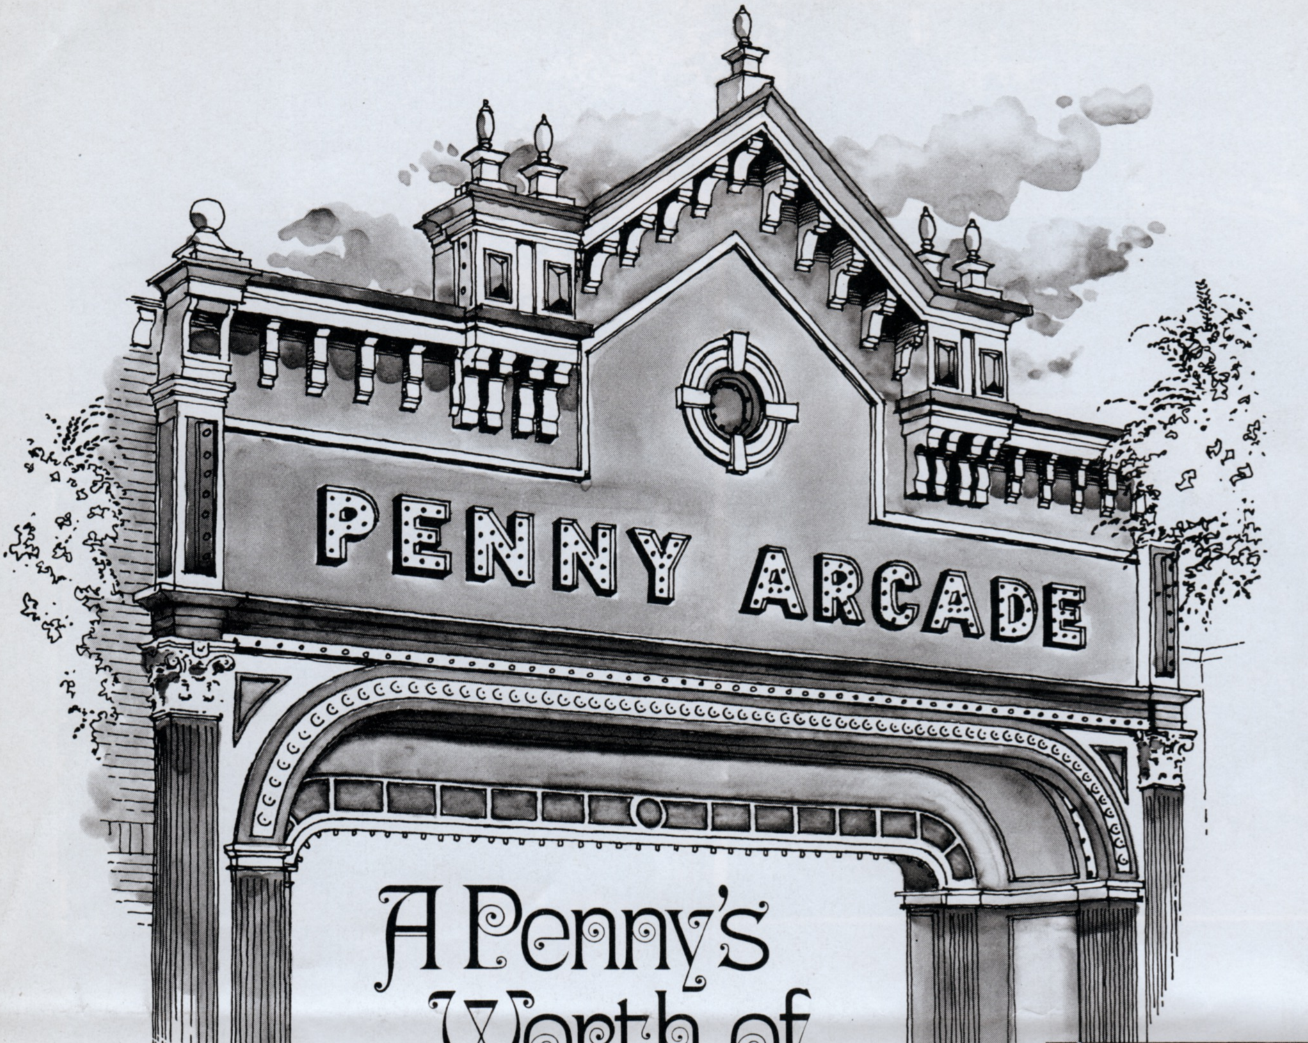
A full pro shop for golf and tennis carries a complete line of sportswear and gear. For guests who may have traveled light, sports equipment is available for renting, and pros are on hand for private lessons. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner, with a view of the marina and fairway, is superb at the Club. There is a large dining room and banquet areas, or a snack bar and patio for quick meals during the day.

Cypress, pine, oak, and bay trees hide the community's most secluded living area, the Treehouse Village. Golfers are often surprised when they look up from a swing and see an octagonal house on a pedestal barely visible in the forest along side of the golf course.

Like the Vacation Villas, these Treehouses are leased to corporations who may use them for entertaining friends, employees, and clients or for incentive vacation destinations. Individuals or large families who cherish privacy will find the fully-furnished Treehouses an ideal escape. Each unit has its own laundry facilities and golf cart, plus a wonderful view of the golf course and woods from eight large windows. An elevated sundeck extends from the main house for relaxing outdoors.

There is more beauty to Lake Buena Vista than just morning. There are days of merriment in the Magic Kingdom, hours of pleasure in recreation and shopping, and evenings of moonlight cruises, dining, dancing, and watching...the rabbits feeding, squirrels playing, and deer grazing.

Reservations for all the Lake Buena Vista accommodations may be made through Walt Disney World Central Reservations at (305) 824-8000, P.O. Box 78, Lake Buena Vista, FL 32830.



A Penny's Worth of Yesterday

OUTLAWS GETAWAY

Horse-drawn street cars, barber shop quartets, Saturday afternoon band concerts in the town square. The sights and sounds of small town America at the turn of the century are a pleasant memory preserved today in only a few places.

One of these places is Disneyland's Main Street, U.S.A., with its general store, flower market, and, of course, the Penny Arcade.

Disneyland's Arcade is always a beehive of activity as young and old alike venture inside to relive a part of the past.

Inside, Arcade guests find old-fashioned games, tests of strength or romantic appeal, peep shows, a mechanical fortune teller and an old-time nickelodeon.

The forerunners of modern juke boxes, nickelodeons played everything from waltzes to ragtime by means of perforated paper rolls. Disneyland's nickelodeon is an original Welte Sohne Freiburg 1/B Orchestrion, built in the late nineteenth century. Every day scores of people will stand in front of it listening, smiling, and watching in admiration and wonder.

Clustered in the center of the Arcade are the Mute-o-Scopes and Cail-o-Scopes, featuring vignettes by performers like Charlie Chaplin, Tom Mix, Ben Turpin and Felix the Cat.

Mute-o-Scopes were first introduced around 1900. After depositing a penny, viewers had to provide power for the machine by means of a hand crank. The Cail-o-Scope, circa 1910, represented a real advance in this kind of entertainment. It provided its own power and thus freed the viewer from cranking. When these machines were first introduced they often included "educational" pieces like "How to Wrestle" as well as comedies, romances and westerns.

So for a glimpse of the future, a contest of strength or wits, or for the sound of music, make your way to the heart of Main Street, U.S.A.–to Disneyland's Penny Arcade–and let yourself enjoy the real pleasures of yesterday's entertainment.

THE MOUSEKETEERS REVISITED

"Who's the leader of the club

Hey, there! Hi, there! Ho, there!
You're as welcome as can be!

The opening words of the famous Mickey Mouse Club theme song, first sung on television 20 years ago, are being heard and enjoyed once again by a new generation of young Americans.

A MAGIC KINGDOM CLUB® Group Tour

An Unseasonably Good Time

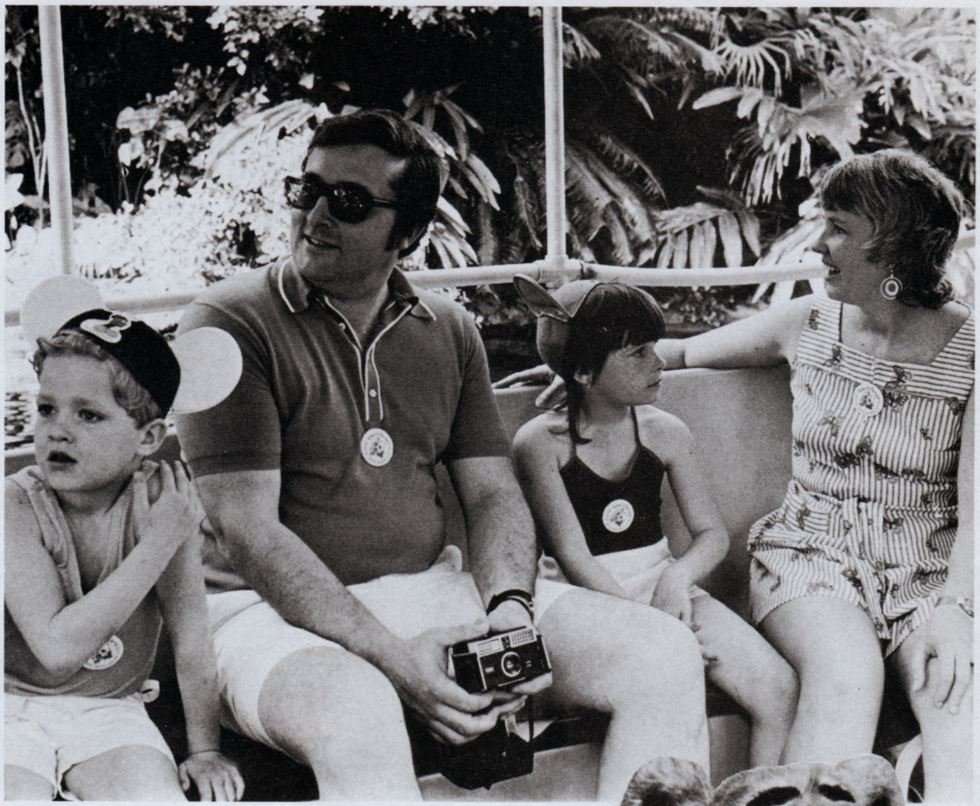
Wintery storms and freezing temperatures were harassing the New England states when a group of First National Bank of Boston employees gathered their families together and headed south to Florida.

By that afternoon, they had entered a tropical paradise where lush vegetation, palm trees, and shimmering waterfalls basked in the warm sunshine of a summer-like day. They had reached their destination, the Polynesian Village Resort Hotel in the vacation kingdom of Walt Disney World. And from there they were on their own, with plenty of tickets and transportation vouchers, to explore and experience the marvelous wonders of the Magic Kingdom for four days and three nights.

Continued

Arrangements for this very special group vacation had been made conveniently in advance through the company's Magic Kingdom Club (MKC) representative. Airline tickets, deluxe hotel accommodations, transportation in Florida, and Walt Disney World Magic Key ticket books were all provided at a low, off-season group rate only available to MKC organizations.

Several of the employees, like the Robert Lakes of Braintree, Massachusetts, took advantage of the low cost to take their children on their first family vacation. Heidi, 13, Mark, 8, Amy, 2, and Bob's wife, Sandy, had never visited a Disney theme park. So Bob, who had been "impressed" by an earlier trip to Disneyland, was excited about sharing a similar experience with them.



Gerald Huben and his family enjoy the relaxation of the Jungle Cruise.

The Lakes and the Gerald Hubens (Carol, and children Kimberly and Eric) boarded a jet in Boston, along with the rest of the First National Bank group on a Thursday morning last spring. Although the excursion was planned as a group tour, each person was afforded lots of individual freedom, but with many added niceties.

The plane landed at McCoy Jetport in Orlando, Florida, where Disney hostesses greeted the guests as they disembarked and directed them to a waiting bus. Their luggage was claimed for them and transported to their hotel rooms. Meanwhile, the hostesses answered questions and took care of the checking-in procedures. All that was left for the guests to do during the afternoon was relax in their rooms, sunbathe, swim, or head directly for the Magic Kingdom and its surrounding resort complexes.

For the next three days, they played in the Florida sun, sampling limitless Disney adventures. Highspeed races through Space Mountain, nostalgic walks down Main Street, U.S.A., boat journeys into uncivilized jungles, and daring cruises past Caribbean islands swarming with evil pirates were popular attractions in the theme park.

Strolling down Main Street, U.S.A. brings smiles to the Bob Lake family.

Many guests also boarded boats for Treasure Island and Fort Wilderness Campground to admire the exotic wildlife and natural woods that abound at Walt Disney World.

Then, when Sunday rolled around, the MKC hostesses were back at the Polynesian Village to escort guests to the airport for their return to Boston.

The First National Bank of Boston is one of many corporations organizing off-season vacations to Walt Disney World or Disneyland for their MKC members. With the Magic Kingdom Club taking care of all the travel arrangements and ticketing, there is very little for the chapter representative to do except choose a date and sign up the travelers.

Every trip is exclusively designed for the organization in the Disney tradition of quality and value. Groups visiting Walt Disney World may stay at the lovely Polynesian Village or Contemporary resort hotels, or choose either a three-night or five-night holiday package at the Hotel Plaza in Walt Disney World's Host Community of Lake Buena Vista.

Disneyland's Super-Weekend groups may extend their Southern California vacation days with a trip to Hawaii where they have a choice of three island destinations.

Low group fares, the best of Disney in travel arrangements and vacations, and the convenience and fun of traveling with friends and family are the perfect reasons for planning a Magic Kingdom Club Group Vacation Kingdom Holiday or Super-Weekend. Chapter representatives and MKC members may obtain more information by writing or telephoning the Disneyland or Walt Disney World MKC headquarters.

...Popularity of Disneyland Records’ “Mickey Mouse Club” releases has prompted production of additional material including six new singles, each containing three or four familiar Club songs.
